Speaker: Jordan Rustad, Last Mountain Lake Bird Observatory

About this Webinar:

Last Mountain Bird Observatory is a banding station located in south central Saskatchewan within the Last Mountain Lake National Wildlife Area. Banding began in 1989, with 1990 being our first full season. Since then, we have banded almost 100,000 birds of 120 species. We have contributed to long-term monitoring of songbirds in Canada and provide education about birds and conservation to visitors from all over the world. We can't cover everything we've done in only an hour, but hopefully you'll walk away knowing more about birds in our province.

About the Speaker:

Jordan first began volunteering at the banding station when she was 17, and since then she has worked up to being Field Manager at LMBO. She has worked with conservation non-profits in Saskatchewan doing a bit of everything from bird surveys, habitat stewardship, and outreach. Jordan is currently completing a Master of Science at the University of Regina, focusing on urban wildlife.
